Proposal to Terminate the M.Ed. in Health Promotion and Behavior
Department of Health Promotion and Behavior

Basic Information:
College: Public Health
Department: Health Promontion and Behavior
Name of Proposed Program: Termination of the M.Ed. in Health Promotion and Behavior
Starting Date: Fall, 2007

Program Description:
We request the termination of the M.Ed. degree with a major in Health Promotion and Behavior.

Faculty Vote:
The graduate faculty of the Department of Health Promotion and Behavior voted 7 Yes and 0 No in favor of terminating the M.Ed. in Health Promotion and Behavior.

Justification for Termination of the M.Ed. in Health Promotion and Behavior:
The M.Ed. with a major in Health Promotion and Behavior is no longer needed. Since the Dept. of Health Promotion and Behavior moved to the College of Public Health, we have not accepted any more students for this degree. The last MEd student graduated in May 2007. We are currently offering an Master of Public Health degree with a concentration in Health Promotion.

Impact on Current Students:
There would be no adverse impact of terminating the M.Ed. in Health Promotion and Behavior. No students are enrolled in this degree. Students pursuing a master-level degree in Health Promotion and Behavior can enroll in the MPH degree that we currently offer.

Financial Impact:
None.
